Fiction & Autobiography

HENRY GREEN : Pack My Bag

MR. GREEN'S entertaining and highly original novel, Party Going, was one of the successes of the last autumn season. In the twelve months immediately preceding the present war, with a presentiment that time was running short, he made this delightful book out of the material he had collected for an autobiography.

AHMED ALI : Twilight in Delhi

THIS is a first novel by an unusually gifted young Indian author, whose work has appeared in New Writing and elsewhere. In this book he presents, with extraordinary poetic feeling, a vanishing side of Indian life which is all too little known in this country. It has already earned the high praise of those who have read it in manuscript, including Mr. E. M. Forster.

V. SACKVILLE-WEST :
Country Notes in Wartime

MISS SACKVILLE-WEST'S Country Notes in the New Statesman have been one of its most popular features in recent years. She has already published some of them in an illustrated volume; and she has now edited a further selection to make a perfect small gift for a wartime Christmas.

W. H. AUDEN : The Double Man

THIS is the most thoughtful as well as the most original book Mr. Auden has yet produced: he has been at work on it for nearly two years. Partly in verse and partly in prose, it is an imaginative statement of a brilliant young poet's attitude to the world we live in.

Folios of New Writing : Autumn 1940

THE first number of this war-time version of John Lehmann's famous book-periodical had a remarkable success in the spring, receiving high praise from the critics. The second number will contain contributions by: George Orwell, V. S. Pritchett, C. Day Lewis, Stephen Spender, Jim Phelan, and many others, and in addition an essay by Virginia Woolf on the younger writers.

The New Hogarth Library

IN the belief that the war has brought a new need for small and inexpensive selections from the poetry and prose of our most interesting modern authors, The Hogarth Press has started this series of pleasantly produced volumes at 2s. 6d. net each.

No. 1. Selected Poems by CECIL DAY
LEWIS

Mr. Day Lewis needs no introduction: he is one of our leading young poets, and his work combines a refreshing clarity and vigour of statement with an intense awareness of the contemporary scene. There are poems here from all the volumes he has published in the last twelve years, admirably illustrating the development of his thought and style.

No. 2. Selected Poems by WILLIAM
PLOMER

Mr. Plomer's successes in the novel and the short story, and his brilliant editorship of Kilvert's Diary, have rather obscured his real achievement as a poet. This volume, we hope, will do something towards redressing the balance, and will show his remarkable range of technique and feeling.

Cheap Editions

VIRGINIA WOOLF : The Years

THE original edition of The Years, Mrs. Woolf's most recent and most popular novel, was published in 1937. All those who collect the attractive Uniform Edition will want to add this latest volume to their set.

Poets of Tomorrow: Second Selection

It is eleven years since The Hogarth Press produced their successful first volume of Cambridge Poetry in 1929. Much water has flowed under the bridges in the interval, and the eleven young poets from Cambridge whom we now present are strikingly different in many ways from their predecessors, and also from the poets who have dominated the scene during the last ten years.

Politics

NORMAN LEYS: The Colour Bar in Africa

THE ambition to dominate others is not confined to Germany, but is a constant danger to every human society, especially to Empires. A century ago our country made an unprecedented effort to destroy that ambition in the British Empire. Then the public conscience went to sleep. This book, by the author of Kenya, describes the new forms taken to-day in Africa by the old evil forces, the laws and other measures which hold Africans back and undermine their loyalty, and which, therefore, every patriot must seek to remedy.
